1. A grass-surfaced auxiliary airfield, commonly called the Sokolovo field, approximately four kilometers long and three kilometers wide, is located on the right side of the Tolbukhin-Balchik highway about 25 kilometers from Tolbukhin and immediately north of Sokolovo village (M4334 E2805).¹
2. Underground installations are currently being constructed at the field. An unspecified number of Soviet technicians are directing the work which employs approximately 1,000 trudovaks and civilians.
3. About 150 aircraft of single, twin, and tri-engine types, formerly based at the field, have been transferred to the Balchik airfield.
4. A grass-surfaced airfield, approximately four kilometers long and three kilometers wide, is located approximately 13 kilometers east of Karlovo. Along the eastern boundary of the field is a concrete runway and about 10 large hangars with capacities of seven to eight aircraft each.
5. Approximately 50 to 60 aircraft of both single and twin-engine types are currently based at the field. The majority of these are single-engine reconnaissance type aircraft.
